

Mathematicians to help rhinos

STUDY | International mathematicians and graduate students will converge on the University of the Witwatersrand next week to help solve industry problems at the 2013 Mathematics in Industry Study Group. With more than 600 rhinos poached last year, mathematicians will work with industry to find mathematical solutions to the rising threat to SA's rhino population. Staff Writer